Research quality

- Credibility
- Dependability/ Transparency
- Confirmability
- Transferability/ Reflexivity
- Validity
- Reliability
- Objectivity
- Generalisability

You will now apply this knowledge in your projects

Do you have questions to last weeks sessions
(online or in presence?)

Congratulations – you completed the first part of the course!

Introduction into social science methods

- Learned how use theory and how to identify research questions
- Gotten to know different ways of answering your research questions
- Learned how to work with human data in an ethical manner

Research Project:

- Work with one of five supervisors on an open question

Short iteration of the process

- Reflects the ideal scientific process – and combines this with agile principles
- You will join one of the five research teams (voluntarily or by lottery)
- Every team has a product owner – that's the supervisor who coordinates that you run into the same direction
- We have three types of sessions: Planning meeting & task clarification (today: theory), group session ("sprint" "execution", independently in the group), status report to supervisor ("review meeting"), presentation in class ("pitch" and "reflection") and one week later: Submission of the assignment

The screenshot displays a digital planning tool interface. The top section shows a task card for 'Theoretical background and research questions' with a circled date '24. mar. 12.00-14.00'. The card includes a description, resources, and activities. The bottom section shows a detailed view of the task, including a circled deadline '29-03-2026 23:59' and a list of answers.

1 INTRODUCTION

Give an initial introduction into the topic/ the phenomenon that you want to study. Use the first paragraph to catch the readers' attention and formulate it in a way that lay audiences can understand what you are studying. A great tip is to start with a statement sentence and then use three or four sentences to justify your statement. Use the last sentence of the paragraph to conclude your statement and formulate a bridge to the next paragraph.

Use one paragraph per statement or argument. For example, your first paragraph could introduce in the context or phenomenon, while the second one narrows down what about this phenomenon on context is research worthy – what is missing from prior research?

Probably you need more than one paragraph to describe the research gap. For example, one paragraph could describe the central theory or concept you are working with, while the second one describes the central research on the context in which you are working (e.g., because your theory has not been tested on social media or in Danish language etc. pp).

The final¹ paragraph of your submission should present your research questions or hypotheses: Based on the previous paragraphs: What is missing from literature? Which research gap(s) or problem(s) did you identify (You can check out the following paper from CHI2025 as an example <https://dl.acm.org/doi/10.1145/3706598.3713829>). Remember: A research question should be formulated openly (not to be answered by yes or no, e.g., how is A related to B) while a hypothesis formulates a prediction (e.g., more A leads to more B).

Additional Keywords and Phrases: Insert comma delimited author-supplied keyword list, Keyword number 2, Keyword number 3, Keyword number 4

Word count: Aim for 2000- 4000 words (excluding references, tables, figures, and appendices)

Together, the presentations and assignments form the group grade

- Presentations: 10%
 - Theory part : 1%
 - Methods: 3%
 - Final presentation: 6%
- Written submissions: (all together = 40%)
 - Assignment 1: Focus on theoretical rigor (15%)
 - Additional input session on the 10th of March – including presentation training
 - Assignment 2: Focus on methodological rigor (10%)
 - Assignment 3: Implementation and discussion (15%)
- Overall: 50% of your grade come from this research project – the other 50% come from the multiple-choice exam covering the lecture

How to foster your AI (academic intelligence)

- As discussed in the lecture (→ #2, memory and learning) AI can support learning but can also be diametric as it
 - Reduced deep encoding & processing
 - Reduced “ownership” of your text
- Helpful when supporting deep encoding and polishing
- We will discuss details in the next weeks but broadly
- In the theory phase
 - Don't have AI summarize the texts (lack nuance) and account for syncophany
 - Clarifications (I understand the text as stating that... What am I missing/ Which paragraph should I reread/ Where can I read more about the following concepts) support elaboration
 - Trust AI with citations like your four year old brother/ dog with not eating the ice cream
 - Develop research questions/ hypotheses yourself (agency matters for fun ;-))
 - More on that next week

How to foster your AI (academic intelligence)

- In the method phase

- We are bachelor students and plan to do X/Y/Z as part of our class project – what are the disadvantages/ risks?
- Revise and rediscuss
- Stay realistic with your own resources – nice that there are more advanced methods out there- we get the basics straight first
- Support for bugs/ dead-ends (but do not have AI write the code for you if you don't know the method)
- Ask for clarifications of how things work and explanations of new steps
- All code and materials needs to be shared!

In the analysis phase

- Support with specific analysis steps
- Discuss interpretations: Given your theoretical background – is this a legitimate conclusion
- Did you think about all limitations?
- Again: Do it first, then get feedback

Generally: Yes, to grammar and spell checks – less convinced of sentence suggestions – fancy is not precise

Do you have questions to this?

Let's get to the research topic fair! – 5 Topics, 5 minutes

After the break – group assignment and coordination and planning

After the lecture: Creation of itslearning groups and a digital teams channel for coordination with your team & supervisor

Twitter discussions about artificial intelligence

NLP project analyzing Twitter discussions about artificial intelligence

Research Question: What are the dominant themes in tweets about artificial intelligence, and how have they evolved over time?

Dataset: Tweets AI dataset

Anonymized dataset of tweets related to artificial intelligence (AI), comprising 893,076 entries collected using the Twitter API between January 1, 2017, and July 19, 2021.

Analyses:

Topic modelling with BERTopic

- Training a BERTopic model over entire corpus
- Extract key topics and topic representations
- Analyze how key topics evolved over time (years 2017-2021)
- Present topics in tables or visualizations

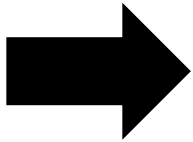

How do people respond to AI-written news?

Lyng Asbjørn Møller,
Journalism Studies

Hillerød Fodbold taber stort til AB Tårnby

Med en sejr over 4-0 over Hillerød Fodbold brød AB Tårnby endelig med deres dårlige stime af nederlag

Af Ekstra Bladet, autogenereret

AB Tårnby kom godt fra start og noterede sig allerede kampens første mål efter tre minutter - manden bag målet var Dominik Kis.

Det andet mål tog AB Tårnby sig også af. Efter 40 minutter blev stillingen 2-0, da Abdou Goddard viste målnæse og sendte bolden i nettet.

Do people react differently just because something is labeled 'AI'?

Small experiment:

Same news story, different labels: Written by journalist or AI

You could measure trust and willingness to read

You'll learn how to:

Design and run a small experiment

Work with survey data

Study how people perceive AI

Political communication

- AI chatbots are frequently used to access information quickly
- Citizens use AI to get information on current political topics, e.g. to make a voting decision
- Problem:
 - AI can be biased (also politically)
 - AI can hallucinate /produce false information

GenAI for election information

Research question

Method

(Un-)healthy food on Danish YouTube

Lena Frischlich
Media Psychologist/
Digital
Communication

Point of departure

- What we eat substantially contributes to our health and wellbeing (e.g., Haslam et al., 2022; Volpp et al., 2023).
- Unhealthy and unsustainable food choices endanger both our personal and the planetary health (Robbins, 2025).
- Making unhealthy or unsustainable food choices is often discussed as an individual failure (e.g., through “body shaming”).
- However, food choices are also influenced by the food information environment in which individuals engage in (e.g., Matthes & Naderer, 2015; Naderer et al., 2024; Wang et al., 2022).
- Thus, the current project seeks to understand the food information environment YouTube channels catering to a Danish audience
- Youtube matters as the average Dane between 3 and 46 spends half an hour daily on the platform
- Studies in other countries have used manual content analysis and showed that kids content is often full of unhealthy stuff – and we found that YouTube is a prime venue for misinformation for children aged 5-12

RQ) Which (un-) healthy food cues can be found on Danish YouTube?

Theoretical background

- Why do food cues matter (Media priming and accessibility)
- How are food cues related to food choices? (Behavioral theories)
- The special role of YouTube influencers

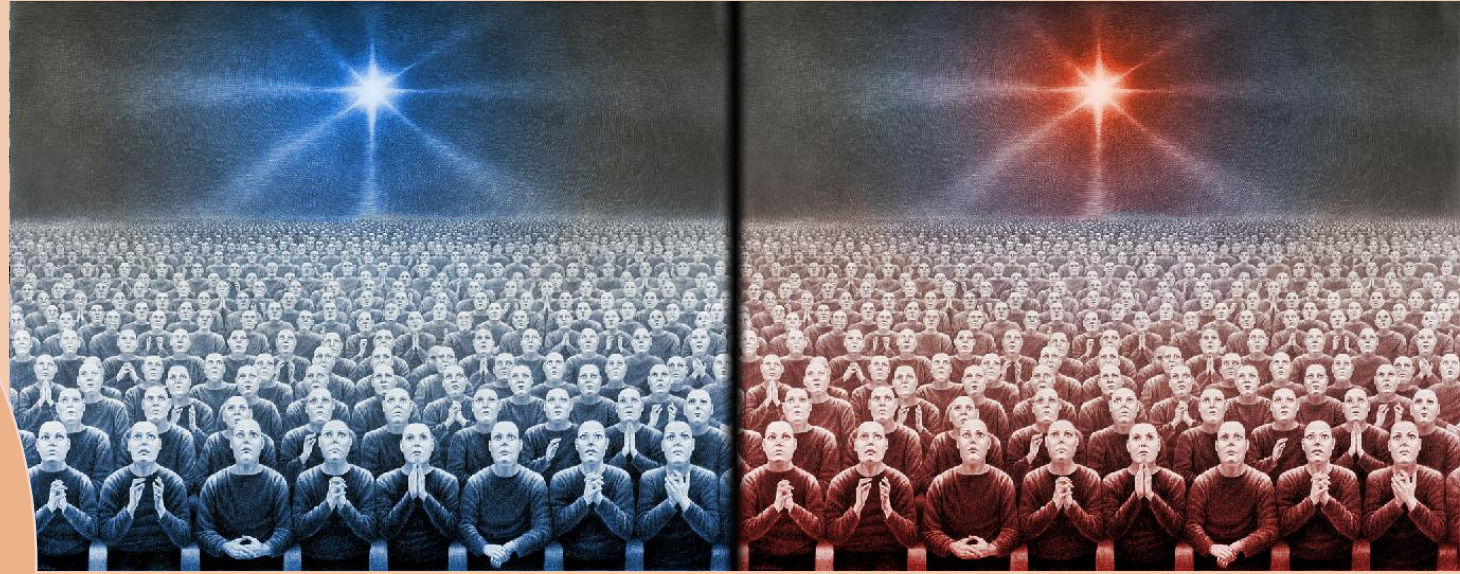

Methodological approach

- Mixed methods
- Use the YouTube API to access videos and comments from popular Danish YouTubers
- Manual content analysis to identify YouTube videos that include (un-)healthy food cues
- Topic modelling (and sentiment analysis) to understand audience reactions
